Dr. Dorothy Blake, Deputy Director of the World Health Organization's Global Programme on AIDS, estimates that 30-40 million people worldwide would be infected with the HIV virus by the end of this century. Dr. Blake asserts that countries should have the political will to mobilize more resources to combat this deadly disease.